Scioto Ordnance Plant Makes Good Showing in Keeping Down Accidents

Minor Cuts and Bruises Given Prompt Attention To Guard Against Infection and Loss of Time.

The Scioto Ordnance Plant construction project is building up one of the best records among comparable projects in point of keeping accidents at a minimum, reports submitted to Major John S. Sears, commanding officer, show.

The showing is especially good with respect to accidents that involve loss of time, and part of the record is due to the prompt attention given minor cuts and scratches to prevent them developing into infections that might involve loss of time.

The Ordnance plant soon will have a full fledged hospital of its own but in the meantime is operating a field hospital in a former farm home and maintaining several first aid stations at various points in the area. In addition, a well-equipped first aid kit goes

U. S. Gunner Tells of First Attack on German Territory

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—A gunner on a plane which hit the ground but bounced back into the air during the first American bombing attack on the Nazi-held Netherlands reported yesterday that "it was a rough trip," but the American equipment was "the best in the world."

Technical Sergeant Robert L. Golay, 22, of Fredonia, Kan., wearing the ribbon of the distinguished flying cross which he won for his part in the exploit, told about the July 4 raid at a press conference held by Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson, of the war department.

The plane ran into very heavy anti-aircraft fire when it attacked its objective, a German airfield at DeKooy, Golay said.

"When we got back and looked over the plane and saw what had been done to it, we really got scared," he related, saying all had been calm and quiet after the pilot got the plane back into the air and over the English channel.

Examination disclosed that one propeller had been shot away and the engine set afire; the right wing badly battered and the tail riddled with bullets. Where the plane struck the ground, momentarily out of control, there was a large hole in the fuselage.

As to the worth of American flying equipment, Golay told the reporters that few planes in the world could take what that American-made plane did.

"And the British boys think the world of the American planes we are sending over there," he commented. "I can't quite see this talk about inferior equipment. It's the best in the world."

ABOUT ANYTHING In and Around Marion

Thorough

One of the complainants at a recent Marion rent control board hearing believes in doing things in a thorough manner.

He informed the board that when some question about his rent came up, "I wrote to Henderson and sent a copy to the mayor." One of the men he referred to was Leon Henderson, administrator of the United States Office of Price Administration in Washington.

In relating this to the board the man added, a little sadly, "I never heard from either one of them."

That Morning Daze

He's an early bird—meaning he's on his way to the office before 8 o'clock—and that's early if you ask those hoisting it at that hour. It's tough, he says, this business of trying to get wide awake at that hour and in fact he admits that he just isn't awake until he has his cup of coffee. Recently when the old alarm clock routed him out, he mechanically traipsed to the bathroom, went through the old one, two, three of brushing teeth, washing face, combing hair. The haircombing job finished, he reached into the cabinet, pulled out a bottle,

Unions Get Awards for Bond Purchases

The first unions to be recognized as having 90 per cent of the membership purchasing war bonds through the payroll savings plan were issued certificates of award yesterday by the Marion county war bond and stamp committee.

They are the International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers, Local No. 336, a union of Erie railroad employees, of which Edward C. Franklin is president, and Scioto Lodge No. 1847, United Steelworkers of America, CIO affiliate, of which P. O. Williamson is recording secretary.

Family Reunions

IMPROBY The forty-first annual reunion of the Wilson Imbody family was held Sunday at Garfield park. Officers chosen were: Charles Imbody of Agostia, president; Frank Wilson of Mt. Olive, secretary; and J. W. Schneider of Marion, treasurer. James Imbody of Russell Point, R. S. Wilson of Marion and Charles Imbody of Agostia were named a board of directors. Relatives were present from Detroit, Russell Point, Marion, LaBue, Green Camp and Prospect. The 1942 reunion will be held the first Sunday in August at Garfield park.

LT. COL. J. S. ROBINSON BURIAL IN KENTON

Hardin County Native Dies at Home in South.

Special to The Star

KENTON, Aug. 7.—Lieutenant Colonel James S. Robinson, 48, whose grandfather and namesake was a general in the Civil war, died Wednesday night in his home at Anniston, Ala., of a heart attack.

Born in Kenton, Mr. Robinson served as a second lieutenant in World war I, maintained his status of reserve officer during peacetime, then reentered the army in June, 1941, as lieutenant colonel in charge of recreational activities at Camp Forrest, Tenn.

On Nov. 12, 1941, Lt. Col. Robinson was seriously injured in an automobile accident while returning to his base camp from a regional meeting in Nashville. He suffered a skull fracture and was overcome by carbon monoxide fumes. For seven months he was in the hospital and then he was returned to inactive military service.

Mr. Robinson graduated from Georgia Tech and Ohio State university after completing his public school education here. He had been employed as a public accountant, worked for a time for a bond house in Akron, then was associated with the William Powell company in Cincinnati, and finally was manager of a copper mine at Anniston, Ala., where his family has resided since Jan. 1, 1941.

His wife, the former Faith West

SAWYER USES OLD POLITICAL STRATEGY

McSweeney Indorsement Implies White House Backing.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 7.—When Democratic national committee man Charles Sawyer left the White House and announced he would support former Congressman John McSweeney for the Ohio Democratic gubernatorial nomination he invoked one of the oldest—and probably the most effective—political stratagems.

Although Sawyer said he had not discussed politics with the President Wednesday, his public indorsement of McSweeney undoubtedly will be interpreted by many voters as reflecting the views of Mr. Roosevelt on the Ohio Democratic political situation.

Sawyer had been considered a McSweeney supporter right along, but his announcement after conferring with the President gave his stand emphasis and glamour.

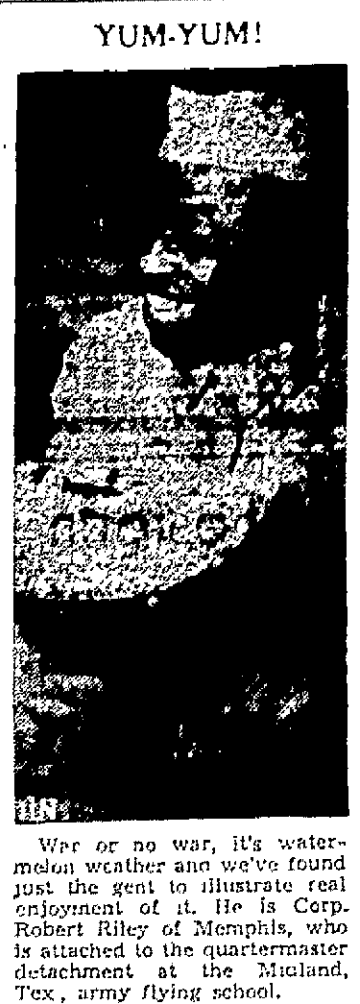

But Sawyer's indorsement of McSweeney apparently did not rattle State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, one of the four other Democratic candidates for governor. He commented that others may have individual indorsements, "but I have the people."

Possibly the most effective indorsements given Walter F. Heer of Columbus, another candidate, are those of the Cuyahoga and Franklin county organizations. But the Cuyahoga indorsement under the guidance of former Mayor Ray T. Miller is somewhat offset by indorsements of McSweeney by several other prominent Cleveland leaders, including former County Chairman W. B. Gongwer.

Former state treasurer Clarence H. Knisely is counting strongly on the personal indorsement of his candidacy by former Gov. Davey, who had a strong personal organization when he was governor. There still are many who doubtless will follow the preference of their former chief.

Atty. Frank A. Dye of Columbus, the fifth candidate in the Democratic gubernatorial race, claims no indorsements, but insists he can be nominated and elected.

To encourage more rapid rebuilding in Spain the government has increased its subsidies to ship owners and builders by about 20 per cent.

Woe or no war, it's watermelon weather and we've found just the gent to illustrate real enjoyment of it. He is Corp. Robert Riley of Memphis, who is attached to the quartermaster detachment at the Midland, Tex., army flying school.

DELAWARE BOOSTS POLICE AND FIREMEN SALARIES

10 Per Cent Pay Boost To Be Effective Sept. 1.

DELAWARE, O., Aug. 7.—A 10 per cent wage increase for Delaware police and firemen was approved unanimously by city council in an emergency ordinance presented at a session Wednesday night.

The ordinance becomes effective Sept. 1 and authorizes payment of the increase through 1943.

A report of the finance committee recommending the action was read by the chairman, Dr. W. A. Whitacre. The committee this week completed a study of department funds to determine whether the requested increase could be made within the 1943 budgetary figures.

Joining in the committee recommendation was Auditor Robert King, who told council the increase may create a small deficit for 1942 but that funds set aside for the police and fire departments under the 1943 budget will clear the shortage and provide sufficient money to meet all operating expenses for the year.

The 1943 budget was adopted without revision. It calls for expenditures totaling $85,214.60 for municipal operation.

FEDERAL STUDENT AID PROPOSED BY OFFICIAL

Subsidized Education Predicted for Colleges.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Education secretary Harold Ickes today announced a special committee of the war manpower commission was considering a proposal for wartime "demonstration" of American colleges through direct money grants to students, as a means of assuring an adequate supply of army and navy officer material and other trained personnel for the general war program.

A student subsidy is but one of several proposals being weighed by the special manpower committee, he said.

A subsidy program would require congressional approval, with appropriation of several millions of dollars. Hence it appeared doubtful that any action could be had before opening of the fall terms in September.

DELAWARE BLACKOUT SET ABOUT SEPT. 1

Test To Be Made at Request of Ohio Defense Council.

DELAWARE, O., Aug. 7.—Delaware will undergo a trial blackout, probably around Sept. 1, the civilian defense council announced yesterday.

It will be carried out at the request of the Ohio state council of civilian defense and the U. S. army. The Delaware civilian defense corps will be inspected by an army officer at the time of the blackout, James A. Samson, commander of the CD said.

Blackout plans must be worked out in detail, set down on paper and approved by the state CD headquarters and the army before it can be ordered.

Of English invention is a liquid matter that can be spread over flat roofs or floors to make them fire resistant.

War Strategy Decisions By Military Leaders Is Public's Wish in Survey

WHO SHOULD DIRECT WAR STRATEGY

ROOSEVELT AND CHURCHILL,
OR MILITARY AND NAVAL LEADERS

ROOSEVELT
AND CHURCHILL . . 21%
MILITARY AND
NAVAL LEADERS . 64%
NO OPINION . . 15%

The results of a Gallup Poll show that the American public believes that questions of strategy should be left up to military and naval leaders, rather than to Roosevelt and Churchill, because the latter lack the time for full consideration of strategy problems.

By GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Aug. 7.—Both Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt have been criticized for trying to plan and direct too much of the war strategy themselves.

Some observers say that the two leaders, because of their enormous responsibilities, can only devote part-time attention to strategy, whereas such planning must be full-time to be effective.

Public opinion is only one factor in wartime operations, but the American public overwhelmingly takes the view that final decisions on military and naval plans should be left up to military and naval leaders, rather than to Roosevelt and Churchill.

The public holds this opinion, not because it lacks faith in the judgment of the President or the Prime Minister, but because it believes that, as statesmen, they are too busy to devote necessary time to strategy problems, and that trained and experienced military leaders should be given the fullest amount of direction since it is they who must execute the orders.

The layman's point of view was sounded by the Institute in a nation-wide survey on this question.

"Do you think that Roosevelt and Churchill should have the final decision on the military and naval plans of the war, or do you think these plans should be decided by the military and naval leaders of the United Nations?"

Results are:
Roosevelt and Churchill . . . 21%
Military and Naval Leaders . . . 64%
Undecided . . . 15%

How Situation Works

Observers have pointed out that at present Roosevelt is the one who must make major strategy decisions on behalf of the United States.

CHAPTER 44

The Plot Doesn't Sell

"Why, Ward?" Dean Thorndike asked. "Why?"

"I should think you might guess. I was short in my accounts. I needed the bonds and I delivered them late, knowing Clarke couldn't get to a safe deposit box."

"You took them back to the office?"

"That same night," Ward answered. "That was what made the plan so safe. I stole the bonds but I did not keep them, nor attempt to use them. I simply took them back and substituted them for the ones I had sold."

"Wait a minute," Fenner pushed away from the wall and his voice rasped like a file. "How did you know Della Stewart had the envelope?"

"What?" Joyce gasped the word. "I can even tell you what she did when she came out. Clarke had a front apartment. After I shot him I stepped to the front window. I just happened to notice her cross the street. She went to her car, then stepped out in the street and went along to mine which I'd parked a few cars behind, not seeing her at the time."

"He glanced at Della. 'That's right, isn't it?'"

The girl nodded, but kept her head bowed.

"That's what made it so hard," Allen said. "I had to save my own neck, and I didn't want to involve her if I could help it. She had the envelope but I thought the things it told about me. I was sure she would not go to the police with it. But Hardacker—when he came it changed everything."

He paused and wet his lips. "The rest of it you guessed. Joyce, I had a gun on him when he opened the office door. I knew I had to kill him but I had to work myself up to it. I made him sit down on the leather couch while I told him what I wanted. I decided, since it could be bad, I should get the envelope. That way Della would never suspect me, because she would be sure I would never do anything like that to her. Oh, it was rotten. I know, but—"

He broke off. He was still watching Joyce, his eyes hot and pleading.

Request For Time

"It was the only way," he said. "I made him go to the desk and telephone her, told him what to say. He must have known what was coming. He tried to get his gun out. I shot him."

"Through the head," Fenner said.

"Yes. He fell forward, his face on the desk. I couldn't bring myself to touch him for a minute, and then I knew I'd have to—because of Della, I picked him up and carried him to the closet; then I did what you said, Joyce. I didn't dare wait there, I hid by the stairs."

"When I heard someone coming I decided to let her go in the office and then be ready to grab her when she came out—I didn't think she'd find Hardacker." He paused, continued hopelessly—"Only it was Rueburn instead of Della. When he went inside I knew I had to get out. I couldn't run the risk of having to do any more killing."

He took out a handkerchief and wiped his forehead. His face was gaunt and heavy. Joyce looked at Fenner and the things she saw in his face scared her.

"So that's it," he said, his lips flat against his teeth.

Murdoch rose from the arm of her chair and Joyce stood up with him. Ward Allen put his handkerchief away.

"I've made it easier for you," he said. "I wish you'd give me a little time."

"Well—" Hester stood up. "You certainly fixed things up for me."

She eyed Joyce resentfully. "Between the two of you, you certainly did. How much have I left, Dean? Fifty thousand?"

"About that," Thorndike said.

"Lucky for me that I've stuck up with jewelry," he said. "I adjusted the collar of her coat and started for the door."

Allen had paid no attention to her; he was still watching Fenner.

"I'll only need a few minutes. There are some things I'd like to say to Della—and to Dean."

He lied!

Murdoch went over to Fenner.

"Come on, Jack."

"You never learn, do you?" the detective said, not looking at him. "It don't matter that he's a killer, huh? You can still feel sorry for him."

Joyce went over to him. "What good can it do, Jack?" She put her hand on his arm, fighting to control her voice. "He's told you the story. What difference can a few minutes make?"

John Nason moved past Hester and opened the door. Hesitating to see if she was coming with him, he found her watching Ward Allen, and went out.

"I'll tell you how much time you'll get from me," Fenner said. "Until I can get downstairs and find a telephone. Nick Hardacker was a nice little guy. I only hope you try to take a powder while I'm outside waiting for Bacon."

Hester gave Allen a final look and went out. Murdoch pulled Fenner's arm and they followed her. Joyce stopped with her hand on the edge of the door.

Della started to rise. "Oh, Ward, I can't—"

"I'm sorry," Allen cut in sharply. "There's no other way."

"Now, now," Thorndike said, restraining her. "You can't let it get you."

Joyce went out hurriedly and closed the door. Hester was waiting at the stairs and Murdoch and Fenner had stopped just outside the door.

"I'm a sap," Fenner said. "It's no good, I tell you, letting a guy like that stay around loose."

Murdoch's face was warped in thought and his eyes were brooding.

"Something's wrong," he said. "I can't figure it. Was there any blood on Hardacker's desk?"

You didn't—"

He got that far before he noticed Joyce's face. She was close to him now, her hand on his arm. Her cheeks were chalk-white and her eyes were sick with fear.

"He's lying," she said, trying to fight her panic and keep her voice a whisper. "Oh, don't you see? He said he saw Della from the window of Perry Clarke's apartment. He couldn't have. That apartment was not at the front. You said so yourself. There was no leather couch in Hardacker's office! He lied, and he wanted me to know he lied!"

Fenner sucked in his breath. "Hardacker wasn't carried in the closet, he was dragged!"

Murdoch grabbed Joyce's shoulder and it shook long afterwards. "That's what I mean. He said Hardacker's face fell on his desk—but you never mentioned blood on the desk!"

Give to the Canteen

WHEN the complete record of Marion county civilian activities in connection with the war effort is written after the close of hostilities,
no pages will be brighter than those telling
about the services performed by women of the community.

The record will be extensive, for the women
taking part in the numerous branches of activity
will number several thousand and each organization and group will deserve special tributes.

Just now, however, we wish to call attention to the work of the canteen for service men
operating day after day at the Union station.
It is making a fine contribution to the welfare and happiness of men in the armed forces who pass through the city and at the same time
is winning praise for Marion and Marion county
as a locality where performance of patriotic duty is foremost.

Approximately 275 women are taking part in the canteen work and the success of their efforts is gratefully testified to by the hundreds of army and navy men who have already been benefitted by the service.

Needless to say, the canteen work has just started, for thousands of other men called to the colors will be on their way through Marion during the months ahead. The canteen women will be on duty as long as this need for service continues, but in order that they may carry out their mission with continued success, help will be necessary from people of the community.
This important work receives no financial aid
from the public treasury, and funds and supplies
for its maintenance must come from citizens and their various organizations.

Support from these sources has been generous
and is increasing, but there is always the danger
that people may allow themselves to forget that the need for supplies is constant. To prevent any possible shortage, Marion residents as individuals and organizations, should post the name of the canteen on their calendars for contributions of either money or supplies at regular intervals.

On a Theme by Wendell Willkie

SINCE his defeat as a presidential candidate in 1940 and his subsequent trial by fire as spokesman for the thrice-defeated Republican minority, Wendell Willkie has insisted stubbornly on the function of fair criticism in this government. His most recent remarks in that respect contained a list of "constructive criticism" issues on which Republicans might campaign. Because there has been confusion on the point, they are republished herewith:

"The efficiency of the government's war effort; its failure and delays in administration,
its confused handling of the subtle and dangerous questions of inflation etc.; its refusal to deal
realistically with the need for a united command of our own armed forces and the development with the Allies of a coordinate strategy;
its waiting until after the election on the inevitable necessity of drafting men below the age of 21; and above all its tragic dulling of
the American people's eager will to sacrifice
by a multitude of ill considered and conflicting
directives."

It is readily apparent that this is not merely a list of issues for Republicans, but a list for all citizens of all parties who reserve the right to acknowledge what is obviously wrong. Approached in this way, Mr. Willkie's call for "constructive criticism" is directed at all his countrymen who stand to gain something by the exercise of their American prerogative as participants in self-government. There could be no clearer exposition of the importance of the function that a minority party must take the lead
in performing; fair criticism of the majority's mistakes is the essence of two-party government.

"Black Market"

AS THE government inadvertently has explained in its attempt to find out how the
"black market" works in steel, it is kept going in large part by the industrial necessity of getting steel when it is needed. Producers like the Higgins shipbuilding yards in New Orleans
have put production ahead of regulations, and it is safe to assume that what they have done
is typical of many other war production enterprises. Confronted with a need for steel, they have bought steel where it could be obtained,
thereby committing an ethical misdemeanor
against the code of operations which provides that critical materials shall be obtained through the laborious workings of the priority system.

While "black market" is an odious phrase,
the fact is that the practices so described represent in every case nothing more heinous than
the attempt to make the best of a bad situation.
Even in Europe's notorious "black markets"
for food, which existed before war started, the situation that keeps them alive is not a conspiracy to embarrass the government but the government's inability to furnish what is needed
in a "white market." There will be investigations and probably there will be recriminations
but when the government attempts to chastise
war producers for producing, it inevitably finds itself in an awkward position.

News Behind the News

Intimations of Russian Collapse All Come from Moscow To Hurry Second Front.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Intimations that the Russian war effort is in danger of complete collapse, and a separate peace is imminent, have been swirling around the fringes of news from Moscow.
The same suggestion has gone into official ears here from the Russian official grapevine.
Even U. S. congressmen have heard from Russian lips such comments as:

"Well, if you get pushed back
and back, what can you do?"
An eminent American news-
writer in Moscow has gone as far as to predict the war will be lost
for us on the Russian plains within 40 days unless a British-American invasion relieves the pressure on the Reds.

An American columnist in Washington has broadcast on the radio the same prophecy, which he expects will come to pass unless the invasion is started "immediately."

All these things make the Russian prospect seem certainly distasteful and convey the implication that we must bear a responsibility for the disaster when it occurs.

All from Moscow

One thing to remember, while reading and hearing the current stress placed on this viewpoint,
is that it all comes from Moscow,
one way or another—not from the Nazis or even from our own officials.

Russia, unlike the United States,
controls all outlets of comment
from within its borders. Any newspaper account really has an unofficial government label, as the Russians use foreign news
outlets for diplomatic purposes (again unlike the United States).
All that these stories really
prove to the initiated is that Stalin
is using diplomatic resources to hasten Washington and London
into a diversion effort.

This second front propaganda
method is also a natural one for the Reds to follow for their internal use in Russia. Their troops' morale is obviously bolstered by prospects of an early
second front.

Now I do not say a disaster will not occur. I merely point out the news from Russia must be understood in the light of this diplomatic situation.

Nazi Toll Not Known

No one here knows what toll
the Reds are exacting from the advancing Nazis. If they are making Hitler pay the Sevastopol
piper for his gains, the loss in territory and even Caucasus oil
need not cause collapse of the Russian war effort.

Unless Red army morale has been so weakened that it will be unable to continue resistance, if Stalingrad goes and the Caucasus falls, the situation does not make a separate peace an immediate necessity.

In the absence of an unbiased reporting from that front, all that can be done here is to withhold military judgment.

While everyone in this country
has eagerly wanted a second front
every day for weeks and months past, the date for starting one is not to be selected by commentators, or even, unhappily by Russia,
but by the military directors of Britain and the United States,
who alone can judge when they have accumulated enough strength
to attempt it.

Also, when the news eventually comes out as to what has happened to our convoys enroute to Murmansk, the public will know how much we have contributed in lives, ships and material to the Russian cause.

No one is justified yet in assuming this country has not done
all it could. Britain can answer for herself.

Virginia Vote

Nearest congressional district
to Washington is that of Representative Howard Smith, running along the opposite banks of the Potomac in Democratic Virginia.
Large numbers of federal employees live there in homes closer to the White House than many in the city itself.

Presumably, to represent their viewpoint, the secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Machinists (AFL), Emmett
Davison, a former mayor of Alexandria, Va., and no novice at politics, entered the primary race against Smith.

Here was a straight-cut issue drawn on a national political theme of the day—a labor leader
running against a congressman
who had denounced strikes and labor racketeers, and running under circumstances in which government employees were expected
to contribute strong voting power.
Davison did not carry a single precinct. He did not carry the ones almost within slingshot range of the White House, where federal employees were a majority. Smith won re-election with the crushing margin of 4 to 1.

Apparently not even the employees of this administration want
a man with such a restricted class
group interest as a union leader to represent them in congress.

India Under Handicap

A Bulletin from National Geographic Society.

INVASION-THREATENED India
faces problems never encountered by American revolutionists
in their struggle for independence
and union. An idea of the magnitude of India's problem may be gained by imagining the difficulties the 13 American colonies
would have faced in seeking independence if: (1) they had had a polyglot population of 389,000,000
like India's, compressed into an area little larger than half the present United States; (2) instead of a common tongue, Americans had spoken 220 languages, and scarcely 10 per cent could read;
(3) instead of a mild rivalry
among Christians, there had been
two dominant, dissimilar religions
enbittered by almost 1,000 years
of struggle; and (4) in place of
the American people's eager will to sacrifice
by a multitude of ill considered and conflicting
directives."

India's prices, who control the destinies of 83 millions, have not been enthusiastic about union because there is a likelihood that their powers might be swept away if the British pulled up stakes. The demand for independence has come principally from British India—the 11 provinces woven around the princes'
domains in a political crazy-quilt.
The provinces' 296 millions are ruled by British governors, who are responsible to the Viceroy at New Delhi, and by provincial legislatures. The ballot, hedged by literacy, property-owning and tax-paying conditions is restricted to a few millions.

INDIA'S people may be divided into five groups. First are the Hindu descendants of the tall and fair "Aryans" who came through the Himalayan passes some 3,000 years ago. They conquered the second group, the Dravidians, who are represented now by the short,
broad-nosed and dark Tamils of the south, and by the hill and jungle tribes. Next is a great mass formed by the mixture of the foregoing types. Another group is made up of the Pathans,
descendants of the Mohammedan invaders. Finally there are the Mongol and Tibetan types found chiefly in the northeast.

From the point of view of religions, some 90 million Moslems (Mohammedans) and three times
that number of Hindus make up
the bulk of India's population.
The Moslem worship, but one god; the Hindu many. The orthodox Hindu, considering the cow
sacred, resists the Moslem's eating beef. The latter, forbidden to eat pork, start an anti-Hindu
riot if he finds a dead pig near a mosque. Separate water fountains
are necessary for the two faiths.
Mohandas Gandhi's All-India
party, dominated by Hindus but containing a few Moslems, refused a British offer of dominion status after the war. Having been refused immediate independence,
the party advocates only passive resistance to meet Japanese invasions. The Moslem League, likewise, seeing self-rule, has urged creation of a separate Moslem

state in the northwest to be called Pakistan.

FIFTY million "untouchables"
remain a particularly difficult problem. Classified as Hindus, these victims of a waning
caste system are forbidden access to Hindu temples and are held down to menial occupations.

Many untouchables have sought to escape from Hindu oppression
by becoming Christians, of whom
there are six to seven millions in India. In addition, there are many minor religious groups.

India has created a sizable war industry. More than a million of her fighting men are serving the British. But now, history repeating itself, India fights old feuds as an enemy skulks toward her doors.

Gold in Runways

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA
—Ants have cemented some Australian airports, and there are others paved with gold.

Army engineers carving airfields out of northern Australia
forests and jungles have discovered that giant anthills, common throughout the area, and the strange cement within them make excellent surface material for airplane runways.

Some airfields were built near deserted gold mines. Engineers discovered that the best runway
surface materials came from the great mounds of gold-specked
slag which some day may be worth crushing a second time.

Irish Doughboys

WASHINGTON—There's a little bit of blame in many of the American doughboys in Ireland.
One historian computed that one-
sixth of the colonial population
at the time of the Declaration of Independence was Scotch-Irish.
Of the 32 chief executives of the United States, Scotch-Irish ancestry is claimed for 11.

Do You Know

Many fibrous materials have at one time and another been considered as potential sources of paper pulp, but the only ones of commercial importance are wood,
hemp, linen, jute, cotton and straw, and of these wood is by far the most important.

The Territory of Alaska was created by congress in 1912 and the first legislature met in 1913.
The annual Santa Fe Fiesta,
held over the Labor Day week-

Nearly 200,000 persons worked
in petroleum and natural gas activities in the United States in 1939.

The Promise of Free Enterprise

By Merle Thorpe in Nation's Business.

THERE are those today who claim that by ordering each citizen's affairs, Washington can assure a better living for everyone, everywhere, and produce "the coming century of the common
man."

On the other hand, great philosophers like Spengler and Ortega see nothing but chaos in turning over to the common man
the reins of society. They say he can not plan for himself, much less for his fellows, has no stomach for responsibility, and takes no thought of, nor makes provision for, tomorrow.

Business men disagree with both the pessimists and lyrical
well-wishers. They have been jockeyed into the false and ironical position that they have no concern for the under-privileged. But, by word and action,
they have proved their faith in the common, ordinary, garden
variety of mankind.

A business man, however, is forced to consider existing facts
which stand in the way of desirable ends. He believes that free enterprise holds the greatest promise for the individual and the future.

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Sunday, Aug. 7, 1932.
Dr. C. E. Tuttle, of Epworth Church, gave the sermon in the weekly union services at the Trinity Baptist church. The topic was "Lives, Golden Key to the World." (Talaph G. G. Evans, pastor.)
Rev. E. C. Gauss, of the Presbyterian church at Bellefontaine,
gave the sermon at the First Presbyterian church here in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Howard
L. Olewiler, who was vacationing in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. E. O. Heckler, of Blaine avenue, went to Indian Lake to chaperone a group of Marion girls
for a week's outing.
Rev. George M. Landis, former pastor of Trinity Baptist church here, resigned his pastorate of
First Baptist church in New Castle, Pa., and also severed his ties with the Baptist denomination. He said that he was opposed to the present denominational system.

Twenty Years Ago

It was Monday, Aug. 7, 1922.
President Harding called upon striking railroad employees to return to work immediately, pending a decision of the railway labor
board on the controversial question of seniority rights. He addressed telegrams to Bert M.
Jewell, chairman of the Association of Railway Executives.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Yager of the First-enber-Mantz road south of Marion.

Brigadier General and Mrs. C.
E. Sawyer were in Marion for a brief vacation visit. General Sawyer was expected to return to Washington within a few days
and Mrs. Sawyer was to remain for a longer stay.

Mrs. John L. Jolley of South
High street returned from Kenton
where she visited for a week with her sister, Mrs. Allen Cole.

Funeral services were to be held Tuesday for Mrs. Belle Neely, wife of Mayor George W.
Neely, whose death occurred at City hospital Saturday.

Samuel Hudson, widely known
stock raiser and dairyman, died
at his home on North Main street
at the age of 72.

Mrs. Ruth Lumberson and Alfred Alexander, both of Marion,
were united in marriage at the First Memorial Baptist church by the pastor, Rev. R. M. Gow.

control when peace comes. They see little difference between such a life and the authoritarian way
of handing their sons to fight against those sons, too,
will have ideas about this when
they return.

What "revolt" of the spirit,
what bounding forward in purposive action, would result if some of our national planners
would recall the principles of free enterprise upon which the new republic was launched 160
years ago? A great student has summed them up:

Our rulers can best promote the improvement of the nation by strictly confining themselves to their legitimate duties, by leaving capital to find its most lucrative course, commodities their fair
price, industry and intelligence
their natural reward, idleness and folly their natural punishment, by maintaining peace, by defending
property, by diminishing the price
of law, and by observing strict
economy in every department of state.

There is a platform which gives great promise, and adherence to
it will in very truth give us the leadership which will make possible a century of the common
man.

His redeemer stood in the flesh

women are more in demand than fat ones. The smaller women can twist and bend into places on air-

stout ones can't reach.

O. Henry Again

Might Be Fun for You To Re-
Some of His Priceless Sto-
Too, Because He Was Our Bat

By DAMON RUNYON

MAYBE you remember my argument
that during person who incautious-ly marked that O. Henry is not in the same class with Bret Harte and that he wrote only good stories. So many readers rushed to assist me in giving during his commentary that I felt sorry for the guy and did not tune the discussion.

One of my volunteer helpers was Ben Casseres, but he turns out to be a botanical bloke because while slugging during he popped at me, denying my assertion that B.
Harte's work is more of a classic than O. Henry's because the latter was essentially topical.

Ben claims that it was Harte who was essentially topical. He says Harte's work is a forever and so are his stories, while there few of O. Henry's stories that do not pay for him, the core of eternal. In short, B.
argues that O. Henry described men and war
as they existed in Caesar's day, today, and thousand years from now.

I will tell you one thing—I am not going to let a literary debate, with De Cas-eres, He is too erudite for me. I know him. He was known as "The Mad Poet" throughout old roaring forties and fifties. He was a mile a minute and threw epigrams more than incendiary bombs around and about
was common rumor that he was a pop
and Aristotle and Shakespeare and Milton
other big game, fellows, and might credit
to you if you did not watch out!

HOWEVER, when Ben James "Roads Destiny" as an O. Henry classic and it goes at that, I am a little disappointed. I do not should have expected a choice list of
O. Henry's tales to be a list of Ben's exceptionally good literary products, and selections would be of value. He says he been re-reading O. Henry's more than 250 stories, and he has started and so have I.

While "Roads of Destiny" is a marvelous delicate piece of writing, it is not even in first place my favorite in the O. Henry collection. No, no, I would like more than one of his collected years, so by distinguished if any person is to be called a "pop" pastime topick O. Henry's "108 best." He all generally included. A Municipal Repwhich I think is one of the greatest short stories in the English language.

Probably my own list would begin with
and include "An Unfinished Story," "The Pen-
lum," "The Last Leaf," "The Furnished Room,"
"The Ethics of Pig," "Hyacinths at the Sol-
"Past One," "Rooney's," "The Rose of Dr-
and," "A Retrieved Reformation," "White Lie,"
"A Little Penny," "The Passing of B.
Eagle," "Mammon and the Archer."

WALTER WINCHELL, horned into the F
even during debate, picking up the til-one story mentioned as "The Ransom of Mack," and asking if it did not mean
Ransom of Red Chief. Mack did not. I m-
"The Ransom of Mack," admitting the pro-
the "Red." The story will be found in "H
of the West" and is a swell, state.

It is a great experience to pick up O. H.
again and re-read the little tales that were
literary sensation of a generation back.
was once called "The American Mopass."
though I think he had far greater humor
than the Frenchman and certainly far greater command of plot. He could handle all kind dialect with amazing skill. And he had a which is not as popular as it used to be writing, but which remains the greatest a writer can have. It is lack of heart in wants that keeps us from having mor-Henry.

MOSCOW.—Upon the dainty feet of a year-old Soviet girl depends at least a couple of miles—the job of getting news of gigantic Russian-German war to Assoc-

Her name is Venus Nightingale, but she

Here is the task of running many times to
from The Associated Press office to press
parlaments, then returning for review copy

likes to run.

She's just as good in snow as in sunshine.
She was hired last winter in this fashion:
"We need some one to run copy." I saw

New Collision Trend

CHICAGO—Automobile drivers appar-
decided last year that it was better to do something their own size or less when they their collisions.

At any rate, street cars and railroad
losses favor in 1941 as collision partner automobiles.

The 1942 edition of Accident Facts
National Safety Council's accident fac-
yearbook, reports:

"Every type of motor vehicle accident collisions with street cars, showed a fatality total in 1941 than in 1940.

"The bulk of the total increase came in collisions between motor vehicles, which was 24 per cent; collisions with bicycles, up cent; collisions with fixed objects, up cent, and non-collision accidents, up
cent."

FATE OF NAZIS STILL SECRET

President Tells Press Conference Review of Case Unfinished.

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—President Roosevelt told a press conference today he had not yet finished his review of testimony in the case of eight alleged Nazi saboteurs and added that he did not know whether he would find them guilty.

The President made no amplification of that brief statement. Shortly before the press conference, the White House said that the President has not yet finished his review of the testimony in the case of the saboteurs.

This statement was read to reporters by William D. Hassett, an assistant secretary in response to inquiries about reports that Mr. Roosevelt had decreed death for the saboteurs and that he had ordered a military tribunal to try them.

Mr. Roosevelt had disclosed Tuesday that he expected to spend at least two or three days reviewing the evidence and findings of the military trial commission. He is the sole reviewing authority who will pass on the commission's sentence.

White House officials declined to amplify the brief statement by Hassett which said:

"The President has not yet concluded his reading of the testimony in the case of the saboteurs."

There remained a possibility that Mr. Roosevelt himself might discuss the case at a press conference at a later date.

There had been speculation among persons informed on the progress of the secret military trial that it probably would be for seven John Dachs and Ernest Burger.

These sources, who declined to be quoted by name, emphasized that this view was solely a matter of speculation since only President Roosevelt could make the final decision.

Good Advice For Gandhi in Dutch Queen's Address

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

As one reads Queen Wilhelmina's undeciphered but inspiring address to congress, with its renewed promise of a free and better world under the Atlantic charter, there comes the feeling that perhaps the course of history would have been changed if her majesty could have delivered this speech before the All-India Congress committee now meeting in Bombay to consider ways and means of enforcing its demands for absolute freedom from Britain.

The congress committee is struggling with the greatest political problem that any people can face—their independence. There are few measures, no matter how extreme, which world sentiment would deny to any race to achieve its sovereignty, but in the present instance we have a unique situation in which race action by the committee might jeopardize the whole allied cause.

A rash move might not only wreck Indian chances of achieving independence but might bring the entire allied world under the bondage of the axis. There is no exaggeration, for India is a vital strategic base for our cause.

New Inspiration

Under these circumstances Mohandas Gandhi, the great nationalist leader, and the committee might find inspiration for a new line of endeavor in the promises reaffirmed by Holland's beloved queen. They might find what they seek in the pledge of the Atlantic charter that it respects the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live. They might recall that only a few days ago Secretary of State Cordell Hull declared:

"We have always believed—and we believe today—that all the peoples, without distinction of race, color, or religion, who are prepared and willing to accept the responsibilities of liberty, are entitled to its enjoyment."

In short, Mr. Gandhi and his followers might reach the conclusion that it would be better to trust the British promise of independence after the war than to precipitate a situation fraught with danger for the entire allied world.

"But," the nationalist demand, "why put the whole burden of concession on us? Why shouldn't Britain grant our independence immediately rather than make us wait?"

British Helpless

The answer is that no matter how the British government feels, it is helpless to make the sweeping change the nationalists demand without precipitating even a worse situation in India.

If Britain suddenly should withdraw entirely from government, and without thoroughly preparing the ground, turn the rule over to a provisional government, it would create a chaos which would be as bad or worse than anything that can grow out of the Nationalist program of civil disobedience. The 560 native rulers would be at sixes and sevens; the great Moslem minority would defy the efforts of the Congress party to establish a government; and there would be other complications.

Therefore, with all sympathy for any people seeking liberty, and without holding a brief for Britain, we can say that England is powerless to grant the Nationalist demands at this juncture. As a matter of fact, it strikes me that the other allies might refuse to countenance any such move, on the grounds that it would be tantamount to handing India over to the axis.

As things now stand, unless some compromise can be effected in the imbroglio, the future of India is extra-severe in all the nations, big and small.

Mr. and Mrs. Craver Cramer of Girard avenue, son-in-law and daughter of the celebrants, and son, Robert F. Cramer, entertained with a dinner at noon in honor of the anniversary. Later Mrs. Cramer assisted at the reception. Decorations at the Shuster home included flowers received from friends and the celebrants also received a number of cards and remembrances. Refreshments included two anniversary cakes.

MARION, KENTON MEN INJURED IN ACCIDENT

Auto and Truck in Collision on Fairground St.

Two Kenton men and two Marion county residents were injured in an automobile-truck collision late yesterday afternoon at Fairground and Fountain streets.

Kelly Smith of Kenton was treated for an ankle fracture and other injuries at Marion City hospital and Roy Pfeiffer, also of Kenton, riding with him, suffered a dislocated shoulder and a severe head cut that caused considerable loss of blood. A deputy from the sheriff's office helped tie up the arm to check the flow of blood in the way to the hospital. Condition of both men was reported good this morning.

James Furness of Marion route 3 and his cousin, John Furness of Nell avenue, were occupants of the car that figured in the crash. They suffered minor face lacerations.

The Kenton men had just delivered a load of scrap to the Malo Bros. junkyard a short time before the mishap. The truck was crushed against a telephone pole and its racks were thrown a considerable distance. The automobile, also badly damaged, ended its plunge in a potato patch.

CIRCUS FIRE SUSPECT HELD IN CLEVELAND

Police, However, Doubt Truth of His Confession.

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, Aug. 7.—Detective Frank W. Story returned here from Pittsburgh today with a suspect in the $200,000 Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey fire but expressed the opinion that the 15-year-old boy had nothing to do with the conflagration.

District Attorney Russell H. Adams at Pittsburgh reported Leonard "Ford" admitted he and a companion started the fire which brought death to 42 non-performing animals in the circus menagerie Tuesday.

But Story said Ford, who was taken into custody, was vague when questioned about the menagerie tent and the animals in it, and was trapped into making a number of statements which did not hang together. Pittsburgh police also were convinced the youth had made a false confession, Story reported.

Circus officials, however, said their records showed Ford was 15 when he was taken into custody and discharged shortly before the flames broke loose. He was paid off shortly after the fire.

Pennsylvania railroad police arrested Ford in Duquesne, near Pittsburgh. He was taken into custody when a circus mail ticket was found in his possession.

Adams said Ford related that he and a 20-year-old Pittsburgh companion named Jess, whom police are seeking, started the fire "to get even with the circus."

"We puffed on the cigarettes until they got a good light," Adams quoted the boy. "The other fellow shot his cigarette into the straw. I hesitated but he persuaded me to do the same and threatened me with a knife if I didn't. I felt pretty sorry when I saw all those dead animals lying around."

The circus moved from here to Akron, where it performs today.

RELICS

foundries would be for the park board to ask city council for authority to dispose of them. The matter then would be turned over to the ordinance and franchise committee to have drawn a resolution authorizing the sale by park board.

The mayor raised the point of whether the relics belong to the park board or to some patriotic organization which may, years ago, have come into possession of the pieces and presented them to the parks.

Irving L. Dutt, chairman of the park board, expressed the feeling this morning that now the nation is engaged in a serious war the relics should be turned into ammunition but said it would be necessary to call the board together for action. Other members are L. M. Sager secretary, and Rev. J. A. Carraker of Forest Lawn Presbyterian church.

FEELS COUNCIL SHOULD ACT

Mr. Dutt said about all the relics are good for any more are for children to play on and that the board had been at considerable expense to repair one relic so that children would not be hurt. He said he felt the authorization to dispose of the relics should come from council.

Clyde C. Caldwell, co-chairman of Marion's salvage committee, said he had talked unofficially with one member of the park board about contributing the relics to the scrap drive.

Discussion of the park relics also brought up the subject of heavy World War I shells on either side of the entrance to the Legion Dugout on South High street, the Civil war cannon in front of the Civil war monument in the Marion cemetery and the D. A. R. doughboy in the park across from the Harding memorial.

The census was that the doughboy is a thing apart from the present drive, that it is a memorial bought at considerable expense, that it is one of the city's most beautifully executed tributes to the men of World War I and that it should be the last bit of metal to leave Marion for the present war.

LEGION POST SHELLS

Commander E. M. Brethaupt of Bird-McGinnis Post No. 162, American Legion, said he felt that the shells would have no value in the Dugout doorway and suggested that they might be replaced by painted wood replicas. He added that contributing them to the scrap drive would be a matter for action by the post.

Whether the cannon in the cemetery belongs to the cemetery or to the city was questioned as was whether it could be considered a part of the Civil war memorial design.

The relics in the parks have been there about 20 years and no one seemed certain today who had given them or what wars they represented.

Marion, once a quarry and now a swimming pool.

C. E. Merkel of Mt. Vernon avenue, who looks after the property for the Crystal Lake Park Co., said there is considerable equipment on the bottom of the lake, but that it wouldn't compare in volume with that at Owens quarry.

About five years ago, when the lake was at the lowest level in years, an out-of-city salvaging company took about 60 tons of scrap metal from the shallower parts of the lake, but didn't reach the equipment in the deepest parts, he said.

He said he couldn't estimate how much scrap is still in the lake but thought there probably is a small locomotive, considerable railroad track, pumps and other equipment there.

The quarry he said was started by the Lippincott Brothers and later was sold to the France Stone Co. which operated it for some time. He said the company drilled some pits about 1908 or 1909 in which they planned to install pumps to keep the bottom of the quarry free from water. Instead the drills tapped an underground water vein. This happened late in the day and workers late planning to plug the opening when they went back next morning the pit was nearly filled with water, forcing abandonment of the place without salvaging hardly any of the equipment.

Mr. Merkel said he couldn't hazard a guess as to whether further salvaging efforts at the lake would be justified because he doesn't know definitely what equipment is still there nor how much of a job would be involved getting the salvage out. He speculated that the submerged tracks are gradually rotting loose.

Honey Production in State, County Cut by Weather

Honey production in Marion county this year will be only 10 per cent to 25 per cent of last year's yield due to cold and rainy conditions this spring, according to U. E. Hootman, inspector for the Beekeepers' association in the county. The average will be the 10 per cent figure.

With a greater demand for honey than usual because of sugar rationing, some keepers in the state will have to feed bees on sugar to keep them from starving, although it is expected that the flow of nectar from fall plants will be sufficient to save the day.

An example of the falling off of production in Marion county, Mr. Hootman gave figures on his own hives which he opened recently. "In the 180 boxes of comb honey he found 60 filled sections. With the usual production of extracted honey 100 pounds or more per colony, 35 to 40 pounds was this year's take. One hundred pounds will be the exception for any beekeeper this year, he said."

Number of apiaries in the county increased slightly this year with some owners keeping one or two hives for their own supply to supplement sugar rations. There are about 200 apiaries in the county at present.

Those that are isolated will get best results. Some keepers may have to move bees to sections where they can get sufficient supplies of nectar. The coming of goldenrod, Spanish needles, and later wild asters, the situation will be greatly eased, Mr. Hootman said.

The Associated Press today reported a similar situation exists throughout the entire state, with practically no surplus honey available.

MARION, GALION BUS LINES' ORDER ISSUED

Companies Directed To Eliminate Duplicate Service

In a special directive order issued by the public utilities commission today, the Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, Inc. and the Galion-Mansfield Transit Co. Galion-Mansfield, Mansfield and Galion were ordered to avoid duplicate service between the cities to conserve equipment.

Officials here said the only change locally would be institution of two new Greyhound bus schedules between Marion and Galion. These schedules are already in effect, they said. The new Greyhound runs will leave here at 7:20 and 11:20 p. m. daily. Other daily runs are at 11:55 a. m. and 6 p. m. The runs are all daily except the 7 p. m. one which is except Sunday.

The Associated Press reported the order asked each firm to:

"1. Honor each other's tickets between all points common to their lines and to divert to each other's traffic routing between such points for the purpose of relieving overloads and reducing the operation of additional equipment in extra sections."

"2. Adjust and establish schedules to eliminate times of duplicate departure and provide reasonable frequency service."

The commission said the requested action was to "assure maximum utilization of facilities, services and equipment" of the two lines.

ploughed up nearly 20 feet of shore earth.

"Engine room: signals must have been mixed up," the officer said. An investigation is under way.

FINISH NAVAL COURSE

Two Marion men this week completed a 16-week course of training at the service schools of the U. S. navy at the Great Lakes Training school in Illinois. The school reported today. They are Ernest G. Shirk and Clifford J. Price, both machinists' mates. They are eligible to take qualifying examination for ratings as petty officers in their specialized field.

City Dump Salvage Regularly Removed

Marion's city dumping grounds west of the city have been mentioned as a possible source of scrap salvage for the war effort, but take the word of Safety Service Director Clyde C. Caldwell the salvaging job is being done in an efficient manner and has been taken care of regularly for many years past.

It is done by a group of salvage workers who help the city keep the dumping grounds leveled and who also help unload trucks for the privilege of picking through the rubbish for materials that can be salvaged.

They pick out all the metal, glass, paper and rags that show up in the rubbish and their work, although done primarily for the small income they manage to squeeze out of their pickings, serves to keep anything of value flowing back into the nation's war effort through regular commercial channels.

Naval Officer Reata Case After Testifying

By The Associated Press
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—Lieut. Comdr. Maurice N. Aroff's personal defense against navy charges he accepted Tony Martin's $350 car as a gift rested today on a contention he has made repeatedly—that he took the automobile only so he could sell it for the slinger-act.

The 35-year-old officer, testifying in his own behalf before a six-judge naval court martial, quoted in support of his case from conversations he said he had had with Martin.

The slinger, arriving here in haste from Chicago last January to be sworn into the navy, offered him the use of the automobile, Aroff related, because he had been unable to pick up one for Aroff in the east, as the commander had asked him to do.

Miss Mary Archer
Weds J. A. Wheat,
U. S. Navy Officer

ANNOUNCEMENT is being made here of the marriage of Miss Mary Archer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Wheat, of Marion, and Joseph Allen Wheat, of Cumberland, which took place Wednesday, July 22, in Washington, D. C. The ceremony was read in the West Washington Baptist church with the bride's grandfather, Rev. T. H. Fitzgerald, 87, of Beekley, W. Va., reading the ceremony, assisted by Rev. C. B. Austin.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Mills Archer of Marion, and a stepdaughter of Mrs. S. M. Archer of 330 Willow street. Mr. Wheat is the son of Mrs. Joseph Allen Wheat of Charlottesville, Va., and the late Mr. Wheat.

Mrs. S. M. Archer of Arlington, Va., sister-in-law of the bride, was her matron of honor and Miss Mary Miller Wheat of Charlottesville, sister of the bridegroom, was the maid of honor.

M. Erskine Wheat of Charlottesville served as his brother's best man and ushers were Dr. C. Joseph Horgan of Rockville and Douglas Shackelford of Roanoke, Va.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Lieut. Commander Stephen M. Archer of Arlington, wore a gown of white organdy, fashioned with a fitted bodice and full skirt. The sweetheart necklace and short sleeves were trimmed with white velvet flounces and these were repeated in the vertical trimming of the skirt and also edged the skirt which extended to a short train. Her bridal veil of maline was held with a coronet of lace and she wore her step-mother's pearl necklace. Her bridal bouquet held roses, bouvardia and gypsophila and was showered with white satin ribbon.

Both the matron of honor and bridesmaid wore old fashioned dresses of white dotted swiss made with fitted bodices, of full skirts. They wore shoulder-length veils of maline caught with clusters of pink blossoms with streamers of pink ribbon. Mixed flowers, with pink predominating made up their bouquets.

Following the ceremony Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Archer were hosts at a reception at the Army-Navy Country club in Arlington. The couple returned to Cumberland after a short wedding trip and will be at home temporarily at 71 Prospect square. The bridegroom, recently made a lieutenant commander in the U. S. navy, is awaiting orders for service.

Mrs. Wheat was graduated from Miami university, and attended the University of Oregon at Eugene, Ore. She is a member of the Allegheny High school faculty at Cumberland and prior to leaving Marion taught at Thomas A. Edison High school from 1936 to 1938. Lieut. Commander Wheat was graduated from the University of Virginia and Cornell university. He was a chemist with the Celanese Corp. in Cumberland before entering service.

Mrs. Archer returned this week from Washington where she attended the wedding and visited Lieut. Commander and Mrs. Archer.

PERSONAL MENTION

GALION, Aug. 7.—At a quiet ceremony at the First Methodist church in Galion Thursday afternoon Juadine Irene Ashcroft was united in marriage to Harley Mason Lake of Galion, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lake. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. W. N. Robertson, pastor of the First Methodist church.

Mary Carolyn Ashcroft, sister of the bride, was her attendant. Richard Britton Lake, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

The bride's dress was of white silk organza and she carried white gladioli and delphinium. She attended Leesville High school and is employed at the North Electric Manufacturing Co.

Following the ceremony a reception dinner was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Essex, for fifteen guests. Out-of-town guests included Mary Carolyn Ashcroft of Uniondale, Ind., Ralph Hageman of Ossian, Ind., and Mrs. Robert Dean of Marion.

Mr. Lake attended Galion High school and is now in service in the United States navy. After the reception the couple left for a short wedding trip.

Mrs. A. McCarter of Crestline told of her travels in South America when she addressed members of the Missionary society of the First Presbyterian church Thursday. Mrs. Engert was hostess and was assisted by Mrs. Glenore Hawkins.

"Almost Eighteen," a light comedy will go into production on Monday, Aug. 10, according to Jack Quatman, director of the Galion community players dramatic club. Because of high costs of production club members have decided upon this play rather than others previously selected.

Mrs. Amelia Rieker, assisted by Mrs. Paul King, Mrs. Vernon Williams, and Mrs. Carl Bachr entertained members of the Lutheran church of the parish house Thursday. Mrs. J. S. Blair, Mrs. Ida Linsenmann, and Rev. Philip Auer shared in the program.

Plans for their annual picnic were discussed when the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Fraternal Order of Eagles met Thursday night at the clubrooms. The picnic will be held on Aug. 20. During the contacts of the evening Mrs. Ralph Myers was winner.

Two out of town guests were present when the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Marion Street Methodist church held their annual picnic at Heise Park Thursday. They were Mrs. Samuel Hadsell of Cleveland and Mrs. Philip Keppel of Girard. A covered dish supper was served followed by a short business meeting in charge of Mrs. C. A. Keppel.

Mrs. Lowell Hathaway was hostess to fellow members of the Women's Guild of the Church of Christ when they met Thursday afternoon. Roll call was answered with poems and the major part of the afternoon was spent in sewing, in preparation for their annual bazaar.

Lecture-Recital Union Service Sunday at Caledonia Church

Club Aiding in Record Campaign

ALTHOUGH meetings have been discontinued for the summer members of the Marion Lecture-Recital club are busy with a war service activity—collecting records to provide music for men in service.

The local club is cooperating with the National Federation of Music Clubs of Marion, Mrs. Guy P. Gannett of Portland, Me., is president. In the work of the Records For Our Fighting Men, Inc., a non-profit organization sponsored by recording artists for the purpose of supplying army, navy and marine posts, camps and overseas ones, with record players and record libraries, Mrs. William J. Thomas, president of the Lecture-Recital club, explained.

A nationwide salvage campaign is being sponsored by the state federation for old records, both cracked and in good condition. Those which can not be used will be sold for scrap and the money used to purchase new records for the armed services. The American Legion and its auxiliary are taking the lead in this drive.

Mrs. Thomas is heading the drive here and interested persons may get in touch with her at her home at 518 South Prospect street.

Senators Wham Yankees, 6 to 3; White Sox Score 4 to 1 Win Over Tigers

Chicago and Washington on Veritable Spree; Giants Overwhelm Dodgers As Three-Game Series Ends.

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

With practically no fanfare two of the American league clubs suffering from sleeping sickness as the result of staying too long in the contagious cellar zone suddenly have shown unexpected signs of life.

The Chicago White Sox have won half a dozen games in succession in recent days and the Washington Senators have won seven out of nine in the last couple of weeks for what amounts to a stalling spurt for the Nationals.

Last night the Senators set down the New York Yankees 6-3 in a free-hitting affair in which Washington made 14 blows and the Yanks 11. The usually flustered Yankees contributed a couple of errors to rookie Hank Borowy's second defeat of the season.

White Sox Win
The White Sox whipped the Detroit Tigers 4-1 with Edgar Smith pitching six-hit ball and losing a shutout became Jim Bloodworth-belted a home run in the eighth inning.

Evidence that Chicago's hitless wonders are soaring is seen in the fact that Smith's unlucky southpaw, who has lost 17 times, was able to gain his third victory.

In the only other American league game the Boston Red Sox scored their second straight shutout as Bill Butland, ordinarily used for relief chores, pitched four-hit ball to beat the Philadelphia Athletics 2-0.

Cleveland's double-header at St. Louis was postponed.

Giants Blank Dodgers
Only one game was scheduled in the National league and in this the New York Giants released all the pent-up fury of their last three days to overwhelm the Brooklyn Dodgers 8-0 with five home runs and a steady seven-hit pitching performance by Prince Hal Schumacher.

Mel Ott hit two of New York's circuit blows, bringing his total for the season to 18, and Bill Werber, Mickey Witke and Buster Maynard accounted for the others.

O. S. U. STARS BUSY AT SWIM TOURNEY

Hawaiian Contestants Hold Spotlight at Ocean Beach.

By The Associated Press
NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 7.—Two Hawaiian swimming stars, Kio Nakama and Bill Smith, shared the spotlight today as the National A. A. U. outdoor championships settled down to serious business in the Ocean Beach park pool.

Nakama, a sophomore at Ohio State university who was a sensation in the indoor campaign, was a top-heavy favorite to win the one-mile race, while Smith, who will enter the Columbus, O., institution next month, was favored in the 220-yard free style event.

Kio set a fast pace yesterday in leading six qualifiers in the long distance event, covering the mile in 22 minutes, 11.2 seconds. This compares with the 22:58.5 recorded by Danny Green of Texas A. and M., Nakama's closest rival.

Two other titles are to be settled today: the three-meter dive and the 330-yard medley relay, with new champions certain to be named since neither diver Earl Clark of Ohio State nor the Lake Shore, Chicago, team are here.

More than 75 of the nation's leading aquatic stars are on hand for the 11-event program which winds up Sunday.

National A. A. U. swim chairman Larry Johnson of Boston announced last night that a 12th event, high platform diving, had been shifted to the Olympic pool, Columbus, O., and will be held next Wednesday.

Chicago Cubs To Clash with Cincinnati Tonight

CINCINNATI, Aug. 7.—The Chicago Cubs come to town for a game tonight with the Cincinnati Reds, with Lon Warneke scheduled to pitch for the Cubs and Paul Derringer for the Reds.

The Reds' cripple list is improving, with Mike McCormick, who broke his leg some weeks ago, already taking light workouts and Ray Lamanno, slugging young catcher, expecting to have his dislocated thumb in shape soon.

McCormick was restored to the active list and hopes to be working again in a few days.

JONES GETS 2 FALLS OVER NICK BILLINS

Rufus Jones got the decision on both falls last night at the Army in the main event with Nick Billins, the Alabama Greek.

The first fall he won with a jack-knife hold and got the decision after 17 minutes. The second fall was accomplished with a back-breaker in seven minutes.

In the opener, Leo Jensen was the winner with a prop kick and body press; time, 22 minutes. It was the second successive week the two had battled, Olsen having won the fall the week before.

After getting a fall each in the second event of the evening, the decision went to Flash Clifford for the third fall after the Russian Kalmoft was unable to return to the ring because of a head injury. The Russian got the first fall on a knock-out kick off the ropes after eight minutes.

Lee Fishbaugh served as the referee.

SWOC Team Defeats Hunkin-Conkey; Universal and Holabird & Root Win

First-placers in the Industrial league, the SWOC Local 1649 team, downed the Hunkin-Conkey Construction Co. softball team by a score of 9 to 1 last night at President's Field. Frayer of the winners scored a home run in the second inning. The losers only run was marked up in the fourth.

Universal Cooler, playing Commercial Steel last night at Garfield park, picked up a winning score of 10 to 1. Millington pitched for the losers, Everly for the winners.

At Lincoln park, Holabird and Root trampled the Osgood team, 20 to 7, getting seven runs in the fifth inning alone.

The Huber team rolled over General Excavator in a 5 to 0 game at the Marion Steam shovel diamond. The winners got:

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Henry Armstrong's "comeback," as every one figured, was dictated by lack of dough, but did you know just how broke Henry is? Well, the other day he sold a $50,000 annuity, on which he paid $19,000, for only $14,000.

Dick Shikat, the rascal, reports from Chile that there's a terrific boom in the mat racket down there since they imported grunt-and-groan tactics from the United States.

The Manhattan and N.Y.U. track teams, red-hot rivals, had to declare an armistice the other day when Emil Von Ellins, N.Y.U. coach, married Dorothy O'Brien and picked Manhattan's Pete Waters as his best man.

Tip from the west coast is California to win the conference grid title if the season is played out of schedule.

Officials of the Press, Club and White Sox will meet in Chicago this month to decide whether they'll return to the Pacific coast for spring training. They plan to stick together, anyway. Misery, apparently, still loves company.

Byron Nelson, the No. 1 pro golfer, will play right field for Fred Haney's Toledo Mud Hens in an exhibition against the Browns next Friday.

Those who have seen Lord Byron play ball say he'll be back in his pro shop Saturday morning.

Bob Pastor, who turned down a lot of good fights Manager Jimmy Johnston had lined up because he wanted to play golf, came back to town the other day and started training—without letting Jimmy know.

CLEVELAND INDIANS' HOME GAME TIMES CHANGED

Schedule Changed Again To Pre-War Hours

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, Aug. 7.—When the Cleveland Indians return from their current series in Chicago, they will find starting times of their home games have been changed—again.

Roger Peckinpaugh, club vice president, announced yesterday that the call of "play ball" had been returned to pre-war hours.

This means that the twilight-night double header with Detroit at the stadium Tuesday will begin at 5:30 p. m. instead of 6. All night games are scheduled for 8:30 instead of 8:45.

All week-day 11:15 and single contests on Sunday, will start at 3 p. m. instead of 4, while Saturday game-time remains at 2 p. m., and day double headers at 1:30 p. m.

Weather conditions made the Tribe idle in St. Louis yesterday.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

Flight Surgeon
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.
THE STATEMENT that probably the United States will need 20,000 medical officers trained in aviation medicine within a short time emphasizes not only the importance of the air force in this war, but also points to an entirely new medical specialty. For the flight surgeon must be intensively trained for his work. The important subjects for the flight surgeon are anatomy, or reduced air pressure and changes in air pressure, safety in crashes and equilibrium training. The last is practically solved by the Barany test in which a subject is placed in a normal, but as far as their equilibrium apparatus is concerned, and it is possible to train and condition men so they can stand changes of posture and rocking far beyond what any average untrained person can take.

Fascinating Subject
Anoxia has proved a fascinating subject. For practical purposes, it is to all intents and purposes solved, but in the solving of it many very curious and hitherto unsuspected facts have been brought into the field of research. Medical science has long been interested in such things as mountain sickness and caisson disease, or diver's disease—the conditions which depend upon differences in air and oxygen pressure. Divers who submerge and get under high pressure must be brought out of it gradually or else they get "the bends" (their own word for it), which consists of very painful cramps of the muscles. These bends are caused by the escape of bubbles of nitrogen into the muscles.

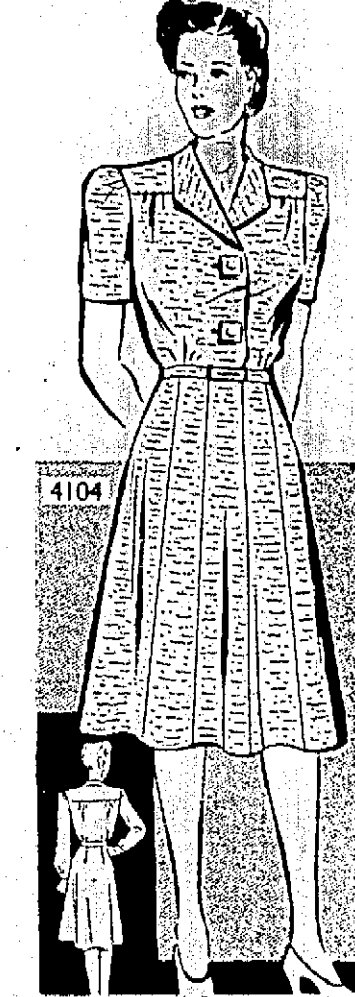

With the increase in altitude attainment, that the modern airplane provides, this condition of "the bends" began to occur in airplane pilots. It is easy to understand why it would: it is simply the diver's disease in reverse. The diver goes from high pressure to our normal atmosphere; the aviator goes from normal to rarefied atmosphere. The same physical laws apply.

What part of the body responds first to a shift in oxygen pressure? Unexpectedly and curiously, modern research has found that the adrenal glands are the ones first affected. Two laboratory workers, Armstrong and Helm, found that if they exposed rabbits to an atmosphere equivalent to 18,000 feet for four hours, the adrenal glands were swollen one-third over normal size. Over-fatigued pilots, especially those subjected to high altitude missions, develop symptoms strikingly like what we have long known to be those of degeneration of the adrenal glands (Addison's disease).

It is possible to teach pilots how to be safe in crashes. This began with the study of a curious gentleman who became interested in non-fatal suicide leaps from high buildings. Investigating a series of these cases, he found that in the non-fatal leap the victim usually landed flat on his stomach or back, so that the long bones or the head was not driven into the trunk. The lesson for pilots is obvious.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

IT WAS NOT the old man's query which had startled me, for I had expected some reference either to Mary or Olinia because of the intensity of the scrutiny he had given them.

But there was something in the way he said "the Princess Olinia of Transylvania" which rang a tiny bell in my memory. I was sure I never had seen this bizarre figure before, even though I believed his white hair and beard to be dyed in a clever simulation of old age. His eyes were hidden by thick, dark glasses, and I wished that I dare snatch them from his face if only for a second. Then I would know whether it was only a figment of my imagination that his nuance of voice sounded familiar.

Fears Discovery
Although I felt sure that I had not made the slightest movement or changed my facial expression upon hearing his pronunciation of the name, I knew he had fathomed my reaction which I heard him say, so softly that I had to strain my ears to hear him:

"I am afraid I have startled you, Mrs. Graham. But if you do not wish to expose me to discovery, and probably death, do not follow up just now any impression you may have received. Sometime, perhaps, I can explain all this to you, but it is impossible now."

He paused, crumpled a piece of roll in his fingers and let the crumbs fall beside his plate, patting a mechanical action with no volition behind it. "I am being watched constantly," he said, and paused, as if to let me realize the full import of his words.

Hint of Sincerity
I usually give this theatrical cliché a mental jeer. I have heard it on several occasions, for so many men when contending in women's folk to give the impression that they are in jeopardy of some kind. But there was a ring of sincerity in his low, resonant voice which convinced me that he was speaking only the truth.

"Please believe me," he went on, "I did not put my question about the princess idly. It is she, is it not?"

"Yes," I returned, then added a venture: "Is she so changed since you last saw her?"

He gave no visible start at my question, although I was convinced that it had disturbed him, nor was there any hint of uneasiness in his reproachful look. "I never have seen her before," he said, "but she has been described to me by a dear friend of hers who knew her very well. I am asking the question for his sake, so that I may report to him."

Madge's Conjecture
I did not believe his protestation of never having seen Olinia. That did not ring true, as had the rest of his utterances. But of course I could not gainsay him.

One thing I could do, however. I could put a question to him which might either confirm or refute a fantastic conjecture which had been in my mind ever since Olinia received the water-color drawing and queer fan letter saying that the sender had once seen her passing in a royal procession and had never forgotten her. "You can report to him that she is here tonight," I told him. "But may I ask you a counter-question?"

"Of course," he said promptly, then added hesitantly, "but I cannot promise to answer it."

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, August 8 A PARTICULARLY lively and interesting day is forecast from the prevailing astral operations and all should move under high tempo, and along entirely constructive lines. The mentality should be alert, clever, as well as subtle and shrewd, and should push the energies to important goals of accomplishment. Investments and real estate should increase, with elders lending solid support. Those whose birthday it is may anticipate an unusually lively and exciting day, with all manner of affairs moving under stress if not tumult, and turbulence. This would be hazardous to excellent constructive accomplishments, under the spur of fine mental abilities of a versatile, brilliant and also subtle quality. Property, investments and possessions should accumulate, with elders, relatives and sound organizations assisting. A child born on this day should be versatile in intellectual and social talents, with sound abilities and judgment.

Prospect Methodists

To Dedicate 3 Flags

SPECIAL TO THE STAR
PROSPECT — Sunday at 10:30 a. m. dedicatory services will be held at the Methodist church for new American, Christian and service flags.

The flags are being presented by the Freeman Bible class, the W.H.O. class and the Sunday school. A feature of the program will be the presentation of the service flag on which state have been placed in honor of all the young men of the church and Sunday school called into service. A souvenir folder with the American and Christian flags lithographed in colors will be presented to each person present. The folder will carry the names of young men in the service.
